

Sponsored by Critical Classrooms and the Expository Writing Program

TEACHER TALK

A conversation and workshop series for teachers that seeks to build community, dialogue, and support for innovative and equity-oriented teaching praxis and inclusive learning environments

Call for Proposals

We seek proposals for Teacher Talk events for 2020-2021, which might range from invited/local speakers to workshops and from facilitated conversations to informal sharing of teaching materials. Teacher Talks typically are 1-1.5 hour events. While many events are centered on writing praxis, we welcome all proposals that support our teaching community in the English Department and beyond.

In 2020-2021, we are prioritizing events that support antiracist, anti-colonial, and equity-oriented teaching practices; support online teaching; center public and community-engaged approaches to teaching and/or address wellbeing, mental health, isolation, and complexities of teaching and learning in this moment.

What? Please submit proposals to the following google form: <https://forms.gle/4qhnEKNT2meAhUPJA>. You will be asked to include a tentative title/description, format, speaker/ facilitator name(s), and budget (ranging from $50 up to $150 per event). We hope to host around 3-5 events each quarter.

When? Who? Rolling acceptance with priority for fall events by October 25th. Anyone affiliated with the UW teaching community is welcome to propose an event with priority given to those affiliated with UWHS, EWP, IWP, and the UW English Department

Please spread the word and direct questions to Candice Rai, EWP Director, at crai@uw.edu.